Re: 06-11-SLR

Your Honor,

I have spent a total of about 30 minutes over the past year (approx) talking with a psychiatrist or psychologist.

The most lengthy "session" centered on a doctor's (yet another hurried doctor replacing another) explaining how ADHD is not a disorder recognized by correctional medical systems (CMS), whereas it has been treated by three previous doctors and has, in fact, been approved previously by CMS.

From receiving treatment in the community and talking openly with my psychiatrist, and

II.

From Research, via the various Depts of Mental Health, I know that AD+D is an established disease listed in the Current Diagnostic And Statistical Manual, And that AD+D often has Co-occurrence with other illnesses. This, what has been soundly established by the medical world, has not been investigated or considered by CMS (vis a vis Alternative treatment) because CMS lacks the time and staff to perform a proper service as mandated in Tillery v Owens, 719 F Supp 41304, 1305, 1306, 1307, 1308, 1309.

Inquiring about this I am told, "You seem to be fairly intelligent, it doesn't sound like you are handicapped very much" And there was no further discussion about Alternative treatment.

Yes, I CAN Figure things out And I AM Concerned enough About my illness And how this illness contributes to how I Function And live. I have gone to great lengths to gain information About it.

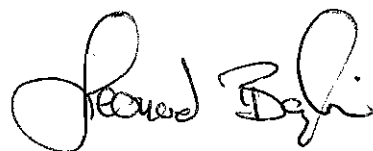

And yes, I Am coherent when the time and Situation And my Ability to Function are Right. (unpredictable as this may be) However these times are getting to be less and less, to where I spend an increasing amount of time in a "MAZE" (For lack of other word). And, unfortunately, my behavior during these times - my difficulty communicating in an orderly fashion - does not stir sympathy or motivation to help.

I have taken an effort to record in words A typical day in the "MAZE", I have rewritten the following so it is readable. Understand my Ability to write at these times is affected And my memory afterward not exact.

IV

I AM trying to Communicate to the Court what is going on. I wish
Someone would understand.

Respectfully
